Six Ways Puppies Show Love

Puppies love with wags. A tail wag is an affectionate canine invitation to come closer. When your dog is wagging his tail loosely, and his body language is showing other signs of comfort and excitement, he's very happy you're around!

Puppies love with licks. A slurp on your hand or a smooch on your face is a declaration of canine love. When you come home after being out and your dog is giving you an overwhelming greeting with jumping leaps and kisses he is rejoicing at your return!

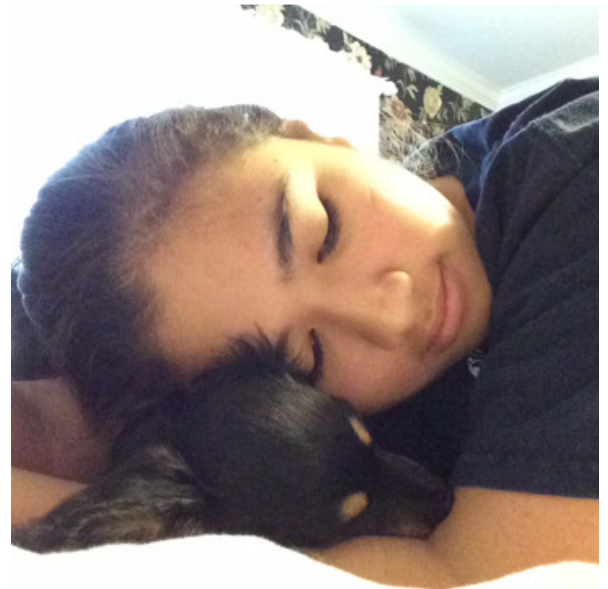

Puppies love with sleep. Dogs are pack animals and like to huddle while sleeping because it helps them feel safe. It is also a natural way for your dog to show he cares and wants to be near you. He feels comfortable and sees you as family!

Puppies love with trust. Dogs are social animals and put themselves into vulnerable positions when they rollover for a belly rub or take a nap in your lap. When your dog puts himself in this position it is a sign of his deep affection and trust for you!

Puppies love with play. If you ever watch dogs at play you will observe that wrestling is their favorite activity. Your dog may initiate this same mode of play with you because it comes to him naturally. Doing a little wrestling with your dog will keep your relationship strong. Take time to enjoy this gesture of family love!

Puppies love by following. Dogs are pack animals and enjoy being with their families. When your dog follows you around it is another clue that he likes to stick by your side because he loves you!

What a blessing it is that puppies don't outgrow these loveable and charming gestures of love.

So what about those kisses...

It depends who you ask. All experts agree that a dog's mouth has bacteria, but so does a human's. Can they transfer germs to each other by the germs in their mouth? The answer is yes, but not all of them. Some professionals believe that dog kisses should be off limits, but others admit they exchange kisses with their dog even though they are professionally aware of the germs they will be sharing. A good oral maintenance plan is the best policy for both man and dog. Brush your dog's teeth every day for optimum good health. ❤️
